About the Faculty Development Program

This Faculty Development Program addresses the need to enhance the knowledge about the Holistic Development and Outcome Based Teaching in pharmaceutical sciences, its implications in teaching, assessment and evaluation. Holistic Development is a relatively new term in education that seeks to engage all aspects of the learner, including mind, body, and spirit. Holistic development is based on the premise that each person finds identity, meaning and purpose in life. Holistic development aims to call forth from people an intrinsic reverence for life and a passionate love of learning, gives attention to experiential learning, and place significance on relationships and primary human values within the learning environment. Holistic education promotes transformative approach to learning, the idea of connections, the concept of transdisciplinary inquiry, meaningfulness and community as an integral aspect.

In this perspective, we could say that learning is a continuous and never-ending process. Through continuing learning, aspiring individuals can constantly have holistic development and become more skillful in their profession. Therefore, it is very important for faculty members to have holistic development and upgrade their professional skills not only for their own development but also for changing the life of students.
